Legal essentials for charity activists

Monday 17 November 2014

Irwin Mitchell would like to invite you to a one day training course on legal essentials for voluntary sector policy, campaigns, parliamentary and advocacy staff presented by Steve Broach, Barrister at Monckton Chambers and solicitors from Irwin Mitchell LLP.

The course is designed to help non-lawyers working in voluntary sector organisations use the law to achieve their advocacy objectives. Presented by lawyers with in depth experience of working inside and alongside the voluntary sector, this course is suitable for everyone from assistant to director level who wants to improve their understanding of how the law operates.

The event will be tailored to the particular interests of attendees and there will be substantial opportunity for discussion and debate. Please click here to view the topics that will be covered and details of costs.

Course attendees will receive a pack of materials to take away and share with colleagues including power point slides and case studies to help explain the legal concepts covered.

To apply for a place please click here, complete the booking form and email it to Rebecca Wesley by Friday 24 October. You will then receive an invoice with details of payment.
